preventing the perpetration of sexual misconduct on campus

How do we stop sexual assault and misconduct before anyone is harmed?

we know the stats about victimization of college females experience rape or sexual assault¹

of college males experience rape or sexual assault²

but we rarely hear about the prevalence of perpetration

6-13%

of college males committed rape or attempted rape³

20-47%

of college males committed some form of sexual misconduct⁴

We know that people of all genders can cause harm, and if we want to stop sexual violence before anyone is harmed then we need to focus on those causing the harm.

perpetration prevention is key

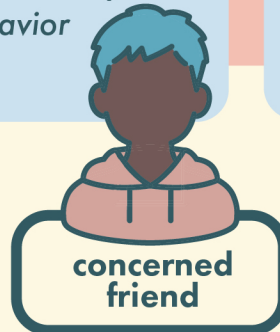

The majority of instances of sexual assault are never reported to campus administration.⁵ So what can you do? What can your campus do? There is a way to talk about this. People and culture can change!

help create a safer campus learn how to talk with someone when you are concerned about their behaviors know how to tell someone how you feel if you have been impacted by their behavior find out how to respond when someone tells you that you crossed a line involve your campus:

- Request resources for students who have been sexually harmed
- Identify resources (both on and off campus) for students who have crossed the line and want help
