Each year, the National Sexual Violence Resource Center (NSVRC) collects feedback from the 60 state and territory sexual assault coalitions on research needs related to sexual violence prevention, intervention, and program management. The feedback from this multipart survey guides NSVRC in developing research-based resources, campaigns, trainings, and technical assistance.

(Participants could select up to three answers per survey question.)

What should be NSVRC’s top priorities when it comes to sexual violence prevention?

1. Innovative strategies for engaging boys & men
2. (tie) Community-level strategies
2. Trauma-informed approaches for marginalized populations
3. Social norm campaign strategies/effectiveness
4. Policy-level strategies

What should be top priorities when it comes to program management?

1. Increasing capacity for sexual assault advocacy in dual programs
2. Increasing collaboration with traditionally marginalized communities
3. Building trauma-informed organizational structures
4. Program evaluation
5. Creative funding ideas & their influence on programming
