Dear NSAC family,

I’m so excited to welcome you to Dallas for the 2017 National Sexual Assault Conference. On behalf of the Texas Association Against Sexual Assault (TAASA), Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape (PCAR), California Coalition Against Sexual Assault (CALCASA), and the National Sexual Violence Resource Center (NSVRC), we appreciate that you’ve chosen to join us this week to learn, to teach, to share, and to grow.

This has been a challenging year for so many of us. My hope for this gathering is that we can all model how to have difficult, important and even polarizing conversations tempered with love and respect. Neither contempt nor denial is likely to bring the change we so desperately seek.

I also realize that for some attendees just coming to Texas was the source of fear or concern, given some of my state’s legislative priorities. Thank you for taking that chance and know we will do all we can think of to make sure you feel the solidarity and support you deserve. If at any point we are missing the mark, please email me immediately at aclay@taasa.org and I will personally work with my very committed staff to remedy the situation at once.

This year’s conference theme, “From Courageous Conversations to Critical Action,” seems like a timely one. The goal of this conference is to provide a space for some of the work that needs to happen to propel those critical conversations forward. Although I realize there is no shortcut past these open and sometimes painful discussions we also have an obligation to actually act on these conversations. People are suffering and we don’t have the luxury of talking a problem to death. All of us have a responsibility to take our issues out of the theoretical and start implementing well-informed and inclusive solutions.

A great line-up of keynotes and presenters will be joining us at the conference. Their unique perspectives and experiences are sure to challenge, confirm, and develop our own thinking. I wish this conference could be a home-run for every attendee but realistically my hope is a good solid base hit. If you hate sports analogies, I’m saying our goal is that this conference is worthwhile and moves us collectively forward.

Finally, please take a little time to actually enjoy yourselves. Every minute of this conference does not need to be spent engaged in workshops. Connect with friends and colleagues, eat good food, enjoy some time in the sun (or the water), try something new, buy something you want even if you don’t need it, and share a good laugh. This is very serious work but we don’t have to take ourselves seriously 24 hours a day. And, if I can help you maximize your experience in Texas, y’all just holler.

With Respect & Appreciation,

Annette Burrhus-Clay, Executive Director
Texas Association Against Sexual Assault
A LETTER FROM THE MAYOR

MICHAEL S. RAWLINGS
Mayor of Dallas

June 2017

Greetings!

On behalf of the City of Dallas, welcome to the 2017 National Sexual Assault Conference.

The Hilton Anatole, VisitDallas, The Texas Association Against Sexual Assault and our hospitality industry have anticipated your arrival, and you can be assured of exceptional service and an outstanding event in Big D.

You’ll hear us say that Big Things Happen Here, and more than $27 billion in recent projects include parks, museums, cultural venues and hotels. Klyde Warren Park, the Perot Museum of Nature and Science, George W. Bush Presidential Center and Dallas’ GeO-Deck are just a few of our visitor favorites. They join a full array of exhibits, entertainment, shopping and dining experiences throughout the city.

Thank you for choosing our great city for your first national convention in Texas. We value your organization’s efforts at the national and state levels to ensure the safety of our communities’ residents and visitors. We look forward to hosting many future NSAC conferences.

Sincerely,

Mike Rawlings
Mayor of Dallas

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR   CITY HALL   1500 MARILLA ST., 5EN   DALLAS, TEXAS 75201
The National Sexual Violence Resource Center (NSVRC) and the Association for the Treatment of Sexual Abusers (ATSA) are pleased to present the 2017 annual Gail Burns-Smith Award to Patty Wetterling.

Patty has provided inspiration and hope to victims as well as the parents of children who have been sexually abused. She advocates both for primary prevention and for rational sex offender management policies, exemplifying and carrying on the bridge-building work of Gail Burns-Smith.

Patty and her husband Jerry founded the Jacob Wetterling Resource Center shortly after their 11-year-old son Jacob was abducted by a stranger in 1989. The Jacob Wetterling Resource Center provides services to families of missing children and support for prevention programming throughout the state of Minnesota.

Patty also founded Team H.O.P.E., a volunteer group that provides support and resources for families with missing or exploited children. She has also served in leadership roles with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, and served as the Director of Sexual Violence Prevention for the Minnesota Department of Health until she retired in 2015.

She has worked to educate professionals and the public, advocate for children and prevention, support parents in their darkest hours, and made many other contributions to making this a safer and better world.

Patty has an amazing spirit, never gives up, and never fails to speak up. She is truly an inspiration and a role model to all who know her.

Language Access
The movement to end sexual violence involves many voices, languages, and cultures. We are committed to creating a conference space where every voice can be heard and where learning can be enriched by dialogue across languages and cultures. To these ends, Español-language and American Sign Language interpreting will be provided and we are currently offering multiple workshops in Español. Many languages and perspectives are present in our movement. We are committed to strengthening our relationships with multilingual communities and to increase multilingual capacity over time. We recognize that we cannot do this without your partnership and support.

Acceso a idioma español y lenguaje de señas americano.
El movimiento para erradicar la violencia sexual incluye muchas voces, idiomas y culturas. Nosotros estamos comprometidos a crear un ambiente para la conferencia en el cual toda voz pueda ser escuchada y en el que aprender pueda enriquecer por medio del diálogo a través de lenguajes y culturas. Para lograr esto, se proveerá intérpretes de español y del lenguaje de señas americano (ASL). También les ofrecemos múltiples talleres en español. En nuestro movimiento están presentes muchos más idiomas, lenguas y perspectivas. Estamos comprometidos a fortalecer nuestras relaciones con comunidades multilingües, y con el tiempo, a aumentar la capacidad multilingüe. Reconocemos que no podemos hacer esto sin su apoyo y asociación.

Session Attendance
Please understand that workshop attendance is critical due to the fact that you will be receiving a certificate of attendance for this conference. Sign-in sheets will be utilized during each workshop to track attendance.

Conference Handouts
Most workshop handouts will be available for download online after NSAC concludes. To download, visit http://www.taasaconference.org/national. If you do not see a specific handout, it is because it was not provided by the presenter.

Phones
As a courtesy to presenters and all NSAC attendees, please turn ringers on phones to off or to silent/vibrate mode during conference sessions. Talking on cellphones is restricted to the meeting room foyers and public areas outside the meeting rooms.

Filming & Photography
Filming and photography will occur throughout the conference in order to capture the spirit and excitement of this event. Images will be used for future promotions and in an effort to record our movement. For individual photos, we will ask for participants to provide written consent. If you do not want to have your image captured, please alert staff.

Self-care
The content of a conference workshop could trigger unexpected or overwhelming emotional responses for participants. There is a self-care and wellness space available in Room 1665. If you want to talk with someone, there are volunteers available to meet with you privately and confidentially. The volunteers are trained sexual assault crisis workers and are available on-site throughout the day. Please see a TAASA staff person to assist you.

Restrooms Statement
We have a saying that is taking root here in Texas - “Y’all means ALL.” The statement is a reminder to honor, value, and be inclusive of all people. One simple, but important way to be inclusive is to offer restroom options that meet people's needs. We are proud to say that at NSAC 2017 the Hilton Anatole Hotel offers all-gender, female, and male designated restrooms in the conference areas for your comfort and convenience. The restrooms are also accessible to people of all levels of physical ability and are clearly marked in English and Español. Please use the restroom you feel most comfortable using.

Evaluations & Certificates of Attendance

Your feedback is important to us and allows us to continually improve and grow as we continue to adapt our conferences and trainings to the ever-evolving work of ending sexual violence and supporting survivors.

Certificates of attendance are provided after completing the conference evaluation survey. Once completed, you will be able to download your certificate onto your computer, tablet or phone to print at your convenience. The survey is anonymous unless you require TCOLE credit.

You can access this survey and your Certificate of Attendance until July 1st. For duplicate certificates or certificates not accessed through the evaluation link, there will be an additional $25 fee.

You have two options for providing your feedback:

1. You may start filling out this survey as soon as the conference starts. You will need to USE THE SAME computer, tablet or smartphone to access this page for the entire length of the conference or your previous answers will not save. After each session you attend, fill out the session evaluation and press “Next.” As long as you access this page from the same device, your answers will be saved, even if you close the window or tab. Simply return to the same link and when you’re ready to enter your feedback for the next session. At the end of the conference, after you have answered all of the questions, press “Done.” You cannot change your responses after pressing “Done.” Once you reach the end of the survey, you will be able to access a link for a .pdf of your certificate of attendance.

2. Wait until the end of the conference and fill out the survey all at once. This survey will take about 15-20 minutes to complete at one time. If you decide to do it all at once, start the process after our conference has ended at 12:30 pm on Friday. Once you reach the end of the survey, you will be able to access a link for a .pdf of your Certificate of Attendance.

You can access our conference evaluation at http://taasaconference.org/eval
Evaluación y Certificados de Asistencia

Sus comentarios son importantes para nosotros, nos permiten mejorar y crecer continuamente al mismo tiempo que adaptamos nuestras capacitaciones y conferencias al siempre-evolucionando trabajo de erradicar la violencia sexual y al apoyo de sus sobrevivientes.

Los certificados de asistencia se proporcionan después de completar la encuesta de evaluación de la conferencia. Una vez completado, podrá descargar su certificado en su computadora, teléfono o tableta para imprimirlo a su conveniencia. El cuestionario es anónimo, a menos que usted solicite crédito de TCOLE.

Puede tener acceso a esta encuesta y a su certificado de asistencia hasta el 1 de julio. Para obtener certificados duplicados o certificados que no obtuvieron a través del enlace de evaluación, habrá un cargo adicional de $25.00.

Tiene dos opciones para proporcionar sus comentarios:

1. Puede comenzar a llenar esta encuesta tan pronto como comience la conferencia. Necesitará usar LA MISMA computadora, tablet o smartphone para tener acceso a esta página durante toda la conferencia o sus respuestas anteriores no serían guardadas. Después de cada sesión que asiste, complete la evaluación de la sesión y presione “Sig.”. Siempre que tenga acceso a esta página desde el mismo dispositivo, sus respuestas se guardarán, incluso si cierra esta ventana o pestaña. Simplemente regrese al mismo enlace cuando esté listo para ingresar sus comentarios para la próxima sesión. Al final de la conferencia, después de haber contestado todas las preguntas, presione “Listo”. No puede cambiar sus respuestas después de presionar “Listo”. Una vez que llegue al final de la encuesta, podrá tener acceso a un enlace para un .pdf de su certificado de asistencia.

2. Espere hasta el final de la conferencia y llene la encuesta de una vez. Esta encuesta tomará alrededor de 15-20 minutos para completar. Si decide hacerlo todo a la vez, inicie el proceso después de que nuestra conferencia haya terminado a las 12:30 pm del viernes. Una vez que llegue al final de la encuesta, podrá tener acceso a un enlace para un .pdf de su certificado de asistencia.

Puede tener acceso a nuestra evaluación de la conferencia en http://taasaconference.org/encuesta

Harnessing Your Voice to Make a Difference
Wendy Davis, Founder, Deeds Not Words

Wendy Davis, Founder, Deeds Not Words
A Global Crisis: Efforts to Address Sexual Abuse in Detention in South Africa and Beyond
This workshop will examine prisoner rape from an international perspective—emphasizing efforts to increase safety in South Africa’s prisons, where sexual abuse is widespread but remains largely a hidden issue. Drawing upon survivor stories, speakers will address the need for increased access to services and care for incarcerated survivors globally.

A New View on Community SART Readiness
This workshop will share the first in a three-tier model promoting community readiness that has been trialed in Alaska for three years. The purpose of this workshop is to promote the process of customized, community-specific trainings to expand community abilities to meet needs of sexual assault survivors.

A Recipe for Implementing Community-Engaged Prevention Programming in Rural, Conservative Environments
In this skill-building workshop, preventionists who have taken critical action in a rural community will share their recipe book for success. Primary prevention in rural communities requires engaging in tough conversations, utilizing creative approaches, and investing in preventionist resiliency. Participants will engage in activity-based learning and leave with practical tools.

Actively Anti-Racist Sexual Assault Services
If we are to end sexual violence in our communities we must courageously and honestly examine how racism affects our own organizations and creates barriers for survivors of color who are seeking services. Hear from peers engaging with underserved communities and shifting organizational culture to be responsive to marginalized communities.
Adolescents’ Rights and Emergency Contraception
Presenters will share information on minors, post assault emergency contraception, access barriers, the legal and cultural context for those barriers, and research and recommendations from the American Society for Emergency Contraception. Presenters and participants will discuss how to provide compassionate care to sexual assault victims despite barriers that may exist.

Interactive

Anti-Oppression + Sexual Violence Services in Culturally-Specific Programs
This workshop will continue the conversation on anti-racist principles and how that plays into building trauma-informed and sustainable programs for sexual assault services within culturally specific programs. Communities served by culturally specific programs are diverse and will look at what the strategies rooted in anti-oppression work looks like within those spaces.

Experiential

Anti-Transgender Bathroom Bills: When Legislation Provokes Fear and Not Safety
Sexual assault agencies want to support transgender communities AND counter myths about sexual assault linkages to transgender rights. How can organizations effectively respond to false charges that trans people’s human rights threaten women’s/children’s safety? What are the negative impacts of anti-trans legislation and repeated accusations of being sexual predators on trans survivors.

Interactive

Assessing Organizational Readiness for Sexual Violence Prevention – A Collaborative Process Between Departments of Health, Local Contractors, and Research Institutions
In 2016, the NM Department of Health, University of NM, and local prevention partners began a structured, collaborative process to assess readiness in six communities to prevent sexual violence through organizational policies and practices. Partners describe the successes and challenges of the assessment process and how findings are being used to guide ongoing work.

Interactive
Barbershop Safety Network: Buzz for Safety - Engaging Barbers in Preventing Sexual Violence
The “Barbershop Safety Network: Buzz for Safety,” project uses a community organizing approach to identify, develop, and engage through an existing network of men in the community: barbers. We set up a series of three workshops at local barber shops to engage the community in discussions around healthy masculinity, social justice, fatherhood, healthy relationships, race, and issues that relate to them. We incorporated an evaluation component through a partnership with the University of Massachusetts, Lowell to collect data on the impact of the workshops.

Bicultural vs. Bilingual
This workshop will address the difference between speaking a language and communication that looks and feels relatable to diverse communities and populations. In this interactive workshop, the presenter will discuss the needs and strengths around creating culturally responsive resources, and the benefit of having a working understanding of the importance of communication in and with diverse cultures and communities.

Black Girls’ Bodies, Sexual Trauma, and the Prison Pipeline
Sexual trauma and adherence to stereotyped gender roles has been identified as the strongest predictor of both black girls’ entry into the school to prison pipeline and subsequent recidivism rates. The workshop focuses on the evidence-based Multidimensional Treatment Foster Care Model as a method to reduce recidivism and re-victimization.

Breaking the Barrier: Youth Access to Support and Services
This workshop will increase awareness and intervention by training youth workers to recognize abuse, respond appropriately, and refer youth to RCC. It empowers adolescent survivors by increasing youth-serving support, develops peer leadership, and creates a youth friendly atmosphere in RCC.
Bringing Intersectionality and Nuance When Serving Muslim Survivors on Campus

Campus sexual assault allegations and Title IX investigations are ongoing at every college campus around the United States. Many campus sexual assault programs, by no fault of their own, have difficulty reaching out to underserved, minority populations for prevention and outreach efforts. This presentation will provide an overview of working with Muslim student populations and Title IX offices as well as the internal and external barriers facing this work, and strategies that professionals working with Muslims can incorporate into their own advocacy roles.

Building the Road by Walking It: Integrated and Responsive Evaluation and Planning Practices, Parts I & II

Part I: This session will focus on moving evaluation of innovative programming beyond anecdotal evidence to an organic, systematic structure for assessing our efforts. Participants will learn about an integrated approach to evaluation, experience alternative ways to collect information outside of surveys, and strategize about ways to incorporate these methods into their programming.

Part II: This session will focus on how to make meaning from and use data collected via the structures discussed in Part I of this workshop. Participants will problem-solve implementation challenges and strategize about ways to transform qualitative data into visuals or quantifiable data for funders and the wider public.

Campus Advocacy: From Assessment to Impact

Campus advocacy is a constantly changing landscape; how do we ensure we are effectively supporting survivors who seek services? This workshop will provide one template for how a campus advocacy center has assessed their work by outlining the structure, limitations, and continued impact of student feedback on improving their services.
Campus Sexual Assault Case Study: Survivor and Investigating Law Enforcement Officer’s Perspectives, Parts I & II
Part I of this workshop series will review the current best practices in survivor-centered, trauma-informed law enforcement response to campus sexual assault. Effective approaches to overcoming the most common barriers that survivors experience when reporting sexual assault to law enforcement will also be discussed.

Part II applies the foundational knowledge gained in Part I to a case study of a delayed report of campus sexual assault to a municipal agency. Part II will allow for a discussion about how to apply trauma-informed and survivor-centered best practices to a law enforcement response.

Collaborations Among Cultures and Allieship To End Sexual Violence
Sexual violence within Deaf, disability, Latino, and immigrant communities is reinforced by oppression, socio-economic disparities, access barriers, and cultural beliefs/stigmas. Fostering collaborations across multidisciplinary spectrum can yield optimal change in public perception of sexual violence across cultures. Participants will learn beneficial strategies of allieship to mobilize collective responses for social and systematic change.

Community-Based Prevention From a Cultural Perspective
This workshop will be about the experience of building a culturally relevant prevention message in a predominantly Native community. What my challenges were, how the tribe’s violence prevention advocates helped me overcome those challenges and build bridges to expand prevention efforts, and form a blueprint to reach other diverse communities.

Community Colleges: Opportunities for Sexual and Relationship Violence Prevention
Community colleges are often left out of the conversation about preventing sexual and relationship violence on campus. These campuses face unique challenges when it comes to prevention, but distinct opportunities are also present. This workshop will highlight prevention efforts as well as explore building tools and resources for community colleges.
Critical Conversation: Navigating the Gulf Between Those Who Serve Victims of Sexual Violence and Those Who Offend
In ending sexual violence there is a need for those who meet the needs of all involved in sexual violence to communicate. This communication is often hampered by many different lived experiences, lack of education, and other reasons. This interactive/conversational workshop will discuss these dynamics and outline the strategies to work through some of these challenges.

Cultivando una familia sana, segura y feliz: Preventing Child Sexual Abuse in Farm Worker Communities
The epidemic of child sexual abuse in LatinX communities is a challenging problem to address. This interactive workshop explores MESA’s development of child sexual abuse prevention efforts in farm worker and low-wage LatinX immigrant worker communities. MESA has partnered with Lideres Campesinas and Campesinos sin Fronteras in an effort to mobilize and engage farm workers in preventing child sexual abuse. This workshop will explore lessons learned, community response and resources developed. Participants will be engaged in arts-based activities to explore those lessons learned.

Cultural Competencies: Working with Transgender and Gender Non-Conforming Clients
Looking at transgender and gender non-conforming clients through the lenses of socio-cultural influences upon the person as well as infrastructural barriers that are also too often sites of traumatization is vital in sexual assault work. This workshop will examine these concepts and offer constructive practices.

Culturally-Specific Programs on Campus: Working with Asian & Pacific Islanders on Campus
Monsoon United Asian Women of Iowa has strengthened its services on Iowa campuses serving international students from Asia and students who identify as API/APA by implementing a Peer-to-Peer Advocacy and Outreach Project. The workshop will provide information and concrete examples in how Monsoon established collaboration with the University of Iowa and student organizations; recruiting volunteers and Peer-to-Peer advocates; and providing services to victims/survivors that include support circles and virtual counseling.
Deepening Evaluation Through Interviews and Focus Groups
Interviews and focus groups can be used to evaluate advocacy, support and prevention work. Participants will engage in skill-building activities for gathering rich data and empowering community members and survivors. This workshop is for practitioners with some evaluation experience and evaluators new to the field of sexual violence.

Desde el trabajo de alcance al trabajo de inclusión y empoderamiento
En esta mesa redonda compartiremos ideas y recursos para promover un diálogo entre diversas comunidades sobre la violencia sexual. Comparemos el trabajo de alcance con el trabajo de inclusión con las pláticas, el cyberactivismo, y las campañas en español para los medios sociales durante SAAM, incluyendo los Twitter chats bilingües.

Diamonds are Forever Priceless
Experience an empowerment curriculum that critiques the inherited and lived experiences of Black girls and provides a platform for processing these very critical realities. Participants will complete and process select activities in the curriculum. We will also discuss relationship building and the mechanics of youth adult partnerships.

Dismantling Homophobia and Transphobia in Latino Communities
LGBTQ youth of color face disproportionate rates of sexual violence, bullying and harassment resulting in a range of negative health outcomes. In Latinx communities, machismo and religion can also contribute to homophobic attitudes creating an added barrier for youth to access support services. This workshop will focus on the role rape crisis centers, advocates, and all those who work with youth can play in creating inclusive spaces, LGBTQ culturally competent responses, as well as trauma-informed advocacy and prevention services.
Doing “The Work” As People of Color
The context of our work has seen increased tensions around race and ethnicity. As people of color, this takes its toll on us. We invite individuals who identify as a person of color to join us in recognizing the sometimes contentious environments in which we work and strategize together.

Educación en derechos sexuales como estrategia de prevención
La prevención primaria tiene su base en la educación. En el trabajo de prevención de violencia sexual es necesario abordar aspectos saludables e idóneos cuando se habla de sexualidad. Es importante identificar y reconocer los derechos sexuales, así como su importancia al momento de consentir una relación sexual.

Effects of Military Sexual Trauma (MST) in Veteran Treatment Courts
Military Sexual Trauma effects many Veterans while in the military and after they separate from the military. In some instances, this trauma leads Veterans into the criminal justice system. MST effects both male and female Veterans who in many cases don’t disclose to incident for fear while serving.

El Auto Cuidado Revolucionario y el Liderazgo Latinx
En este taller co-facilitado, sembraremos ideas para aprovechar las oportunidades que existen para identificar y promover habilidades sanas durante el avance y desarrollo profesional. También hablaremos sobre como desarrollar destrezas para poder apoyarnos y luchar por un mundo sin violencia sexual.

Engaging Men and Youth to Promote Safety and Justice for Victims
The Minnesota Indian Women’s Sexual Assault Coalition has developed a toolkit that broadens our efforts to promote safety and justice for victims by engaging men and youth in examining traumas and societal messages that contribute to men perpetrating sexual assault.
Engaging Trans Women In Sexual Violence Prevention Work

Trans women’s voices have historically been marginalized, even in the mostly-female field of sexual violence prevention. Join us to learn the skills needed to engage transgender women as agents of community change, develop programming responsive to trans women’s needs, and strengthen existing programming through the incorporation of transfeminist principles.

Envisioning a Culture of Respect: Engaging Youth as Change-Makers

Raliance will discuss its strategy to engage youth as change-makers at the March 2017 ThisGEN Youth Summit and feature a discussion with Mississippi Coalition Against Sexual Assault convenor of a Youth Advocate Council and Youth Advocate Institute South to engage African American youth to lead sexual violence prevention strategy.

Expanding Law Enforcement’s Role in Building Campuses Free of Sexual Violence

School and campus-based law enforcement often receive training on sexual assault awareness and interview techniques; however, often they are not provided with the tools and resources they need to engage with the rest of the campus in preventing sexual violence. Law enforcement can be an effective partner in helping to create a positive school environment that does not tolerate abuse.

Experiences Developing Community-Based Violence Prevention Programs for Youth of Color

We will focus on the importance of teaching youth community history to understand violence, and the responses to violence, in their communities. We will be discussing how interpersonal violence is tied to systemic violence (specifically colonization, racism, and xenophobia) and why anti-oppression frameworks are vital for youth-serving violence prevention programs.
Exploring Unspoken Therapies as a Restorative Justice Tool
This workshop is an overview of bodywork therapies as a restorative justice tool. It targets those experiencing trauma from systematic violence, oppression, generational/historical trauma on an individual level. This will be done through a cultural overview of touch therapies, presenting case studies, a restorative bodywork interactive session and Q&A.

Female Perpetrators of Sexual Abuse in Detention: Unpacking the Issue
This workshop will explore the incidence and dynamics of sexual abuse in detention perpetrated by women and attempt to unpack the discomfort surrounding the issue. It will feature accounts from prisoners who were abused by women, and will provide guidance for service providers on addressing this type of violence.

From Followers to Ambassadors: How to Elevate Your Social Media Reach With Virtual Volunteers
Over 60 percent of U.S. adults get their news from social media. In 2015, NJCASA began its Social Media Ambassador program, where virtual volunteers promote progressive dialogue via social media channels. Facilitators will offer insights into how we’ve managed virtual volunteers, doubled our engagement rate, and captured impact. (SMAs will also participate in the session remotely!)

Getting Back to Work: Employment Law Remedies to Help Survivors Keep Their Jobs or Leave Their Jobs Safely Post Assault
Employment law remedies can help with the devastating economic impact that rape has on survivors. This workshop will provide advocates with tips and guidance on helping sexual assault survivors safely stay in or leave their jobs. Discussion will focus on legal remedies available for rape survivors in the employment realm.
Getting Started: Strategies for the Rural Victim Advocate on Working with Incarcerated Survivors
This workshop will address the challenges facing rural victim advocates in providing services to incarcerated survivors, and will feature representatives from state coalitions whose rural member programs are providing a range of services behind bars. The workshop will also include an overview of the basics on sexual abuse behind bars.

Growing the Seeds: Engaging Youth Leaders in the Movement
Successful youth leadership programs harness young people’s motivation and build their capacity. They subvert adultist beliefs and norms to create meaningful opportunities for youth to lead and shape interpersonal violence prevention efforts. Participants will learn youth leadership building strategies and hear stories from preventioneers highlighting their long-term impact.

Having the Real Conversations About Reproductive Health: Forming New Partnerships Between PP and SA services
Participants would engage in a drawing exercise that demonstrates the important intersections of sexual assault and reproductive health and that starts community conversations and education about both issues.

Healing From Sexual Trauma: A Movement-Based, Empowerment Self-Defense Approach
Studies show empowerment self-defense (ESD) reduces sexual assault risk, increases confidence, and decreases anxiety and self-blame. Research also shows that body-oriented healing approaches like ESD can reduce post-traumatic symptoms in survivors. This experiential workshop provides an opportunity to observe, learn, and practice embodied skills, and about the evidence supporting ESD.
Herramientas para Facilitar/Crear Una Relación Terapéutica

Este taller proporcionará algunas herramientas útiles para consejeras/eros que tienen educación limitada en consejería, pero completaron un entrenamiento de capacitación con un centro. Para que se involucren con l@s sobrevivientes de una manera terapéutica. El taller le proporcionará actividades interactivas fáciles que puede utilizar durante los primeros 10 minutos de una sesión y actividades que puede utilizar durante los últimos 10 minutos. L@s sobrevivientes saldrán con habilitados y con ganas de regresar.

“I Tried to Stop Him”: Criminalizing People of Color for Protecting Ourselves

The name Marissa Alexander may be familiar. She is the tip of an iceberg: Women and LGBTQ/GNC people of color are more likely to be criminally punished for protecting themselves against violence. This panel will discuss these realities, and what actions we all can take to end this injustice.

Improving Sexual Assault and Culturally Specific Services, Iowa’s Approach

In 2012-2013 Iowa completely restructured victim services. Sexual assault comprehensive, domestic violence comprehensive, sheltering, and culturally specific programs all received separate funding. Services to sexual assault survivors increased 50% and services in culturally specific programs 54%. We will describe our process, challenges and successes, lessons learned, and current status.

Innovative, Collaborative Responses to Child Sex Trafficking Victims: Letting Go May be the Toughest Part

Come learn how the Texas Governor’s Child Sex Trafficking Team is changing the way survivors of child sex trafficking will be cared for, bringing innovative best practices from across the country. Collaborating with child welfare, juvenile justice, RHY agencies, hospitals, law enforcement and prosecutors, new integrated continuums of care are being designed and implemented in regions across the state.
Inspiring Action to Create a Better Response to Sexual Assault: Medical Forensic Exam Response Protocols Across the Lifespan
This presentation will highlight both National SAFE Protocols. Included will be suggestions on the implications that these recommendations can have for any existing response protocols, policies and practice and include working through some difficult challenges for those who are working to create new protocols.

Keeping It Real: Methods to Level Up Youth-Led Programming
This session explores methods for catalyzing the innovation and expertise of young people as change makers. Through an interactive examination of our “Let’s Be Real” initiative – a movement for young people, by young people -- participants will uncover and discuss best practices that can be utilized in their prevention work.

Knowledge as Empowerment During an Encounter with Law Enforcement or ICE
Knowing the function and role of each branch of the Department of Homeland Security is crucial when working with sexual assault survivors without documentation. The Citizenship and Immigration Service has two programs for sexual assault survivors - a U Visa for sexual assault and a T Visa for trafficking. It is only when police reports are completed correctly, that these two programs can help survivors and their families gain documentation. Having and sharing this knowledge helps advocates support survivors in rebuilding their lives.

Let’s Talk About Sex and Aging: Advocates Working with Older Adults’ Sexuality After Sexual Violence
The sexual journey continues throughout the lifespan. Older adult survivors need advocates they can talk to about sexual health yet many advocates feel uncomfortable in this realm. Through humor and frank discussion, we will take apart the silences, particularly around older adults’ sexuality, and those with marginalized identities; focus is on skill-building.
Let’s Talk About Sext: Exploring the Relationship Between Sexting & Cybervictimization
Sophisticated phones with high-tech cameras allow for instant sharing of videos and images. These advancements in technology have opened the flood gates to youth receiving unwanted sexual solicitations, accessing pornography, sexting, and experiencing sexual violence. This engaging presentation explores the correlation between these elements and prevention efforts to protect our youth.

Let’s Do It Together! Creating Logic Models Using Collaborative, Participatory, and Empowerment Approaches
While you may be familiar with logic models for prevention, you may be less familiar with how to create them together in inclusive ways. In this skill-building workshop, participants will experience how to facilitate the creation of logic models with partners using traditional, collaborative, participatory, and empowerment approaches.

Listening Deeply to Community and Survivors’ Voices
What comes after interviews and focus groups? Participants will engage in skill-building activities to analyze qualitative data in a way that is systemic, fits time and resource limitations, and yields meaningful themes. This workshop is for practitioners with some evaluation experience and evaluators new to qualitative analysis.

Making It Work: Lessons Learned from Effective Promotora Partnerships in Texas and Colorado
In recent years, more victim assistance agencies and coalitions located in states with a large or growing Español-speaking populations have implemented projects that include promotora / community health worker collaborations. Panelists will discuss training issues, and critical considerations for developing successful and sustainable promotora partnerships from tested models in Colorado and along the Texas-Mexico border region.
Messaging About Alcohol and Sex: Having the Courageous Conversation and Moving to Critical Action

There is a significant relationship between alcohol and sexual assault on campuses, but we are often unsure how to address the topic without victim-blaming. This session will address the relationship between alcohol, sex, and sexual assault, evaluate related messaging/outreach efforts, consider relevant environmental strategies, and develop tools to take home.

Style of Workshop: Interactive
Sponsor Track: NSVRC Prevention Track

Myths Vs Facts: Dynamics of Sexual Assault in South Asian Culture

Working with survivors from other cultures can be challenging due to communication barriers. We need to combine knowledge about sexual assault with specific information from a survivor to understand the full context. This workshop will provide tools to understand cultures and identify the barriers that survivors face in seeking assistance.

Style of Workshop: Lecture

Not Just the Facts, Ma’am

We often think of facts as being clinical and sterile, but there is nothing clinical or sterile about rape. For reports to adequately convey the reality of a victim’s experience, they need to include more than just the “facts.” This session will provide general tips for writing effective sexual assault reports. It will address critical details that will recreate the reality of rape for the reader. We will also explore the detrimental effect of using the language of consensual sex to describe rape, and how using those words can turn a rape into consent on paper.

Style of Workshop: UPSAT

Organizing An End to Violence: A Systems Approach to Prevention

This workshop will explore how the principals of community organizing and systems analysis can be applied to violence prevention on a college campus. Participants will practice using the tools of power mapping and strategic relationship building to reduce campus sexual and relationship violence.

Style of Workshop: Experiential
Sponsor Track: NSVRC Prevention Track
Outside the Boxes: Working with Gender Non-Binary Survivors

When survivors live and identify outside of culturally defined male and female gender boxes, it’s vital for providers working within sex-segregated and gender-integrated environments to be adaptive, creative, and knowledgeable about non-binary clients. You’ll leave this interactive workshop with non-binary-specific data, case examples, and practical tips on better serving non-binary survivors.

Overview of Indigenous Healing-Informed Response to Trauma

Addressing the impact of trauma from an Indigenous cultural healing-informed model will be discussed and examples from the Oglala Lakota culture will be shared. Participants will formulate ideas and suggestions on how to incorporate culture into healing responses to trauma.

Parents for Prevention: Raising a Sexually Healthy Generation

Parents want to raise children who are safe from sexual violence, who would never commit sexual harm, and who would speak out if they see violence being perpetrated. Parents for Prevention is an online space for parents to find the resources they need to prevent violence before it starts.

Partners in Prevention: Engaging and Evaluating Coalitions

The field of sexual violence prevention is shifting towards population-based change strategies like community mobilization and coalition building. This interactive workshop will outline some of the challenges of integrating primary prevention into community/coalition work, highlight effective coalition engagement strategies, and detail some ways to evaluate coalition work.
Perpetration Data: How It Can Inform Your Sexual Violence Prevention Efforts
This workshop will provide information on how to interpret available data about sexual violence perpetration. Through an engaging discussion with the workshop presenters, participants will explore potential ways to utilize perpetration data for primary prevention program planning, implementation, and evaluation.

Prevention of Sexual Assault through Predictive Analytics
This workshop will be geared toward campus law enforcement and ways in which they can monitor and reduce sexual assaults through data analytics and predictive modelling. Data analytics has a long history in businesses, where it has been used to predict who will become a customer, who is most likely to buy more, who is likely to buy more frequently and who is at risk to leave the current company for a competitor. Because of advances in computers and access to more and more data, the very same data analytics and predictive modelling is being applied to crime data to answer many questions: Who is likely to be a recidivist? What areas are most at risk for crime? How does this vary by time of day, day of week and season of the year? What does the victim profile look like? What different types of predators are there, and how does this impact our policing strategy?

Preventionist’s Oh Snap Kit: Strategies to have Transparent and Compassionate Conversations When Working with Young People
This workshop will facilitate a conversation for preventionists to account for intersectionality when working with youth. Through a reflective discussion of the facilitator’s and participants’ own privileges and triggers, we can identify compassionate and transparent methods of communication to address “oh snap moments” when controversial topics arise.
Reducing the Likelihood Youth Will Sexually Offend as a Key Strategy to Prevent Sexual Violence

Help Wanted, a project by The Moore Center for the Prevention of Child Sexual Abuse at Bloomberg School of Public Health, Johns Hopkins University, is exploring ways to support earlier intervention into the lives of young people to empower and realize lives free from causing sexual harm.

Repensando la Prevención de Violencia Sexual en las Universidades.

Para abordar la prevención de violencia sexual en las universidades hay que revisar las estrategias de educación. La perspectiva de género integrada a un trabajo de base con estudiantes educadores/as pares es primordial para la prevención. Se compartirán experiencias de prevención utilizadas en Puerto Rico.

Representing Oppression: Bringing Clearer Vision and Understanding to Queer Communities and Communities of Color

Drawing on multidisciplinary research through interactive and relatable approaches, this workshop aims to empower participants to rethink their relationship to dynamics of oppression effecting people of color and LGBTQ communities and develop strategies for translating insight into actionable strategies for support.

Sabiduría Generacional: Conversaciones sobre experiencias valores y diferencias en nuestras historias, caminos y direcciones

Valorando las diferencias y entablando una conversacion interactiva sobre la interseccion de los valores intergeneracionales, internacionales, inter/intra-familiares, inter/intra-agencias, en la comunidad de asesoras Latinx. Tocando temas de anti-opresion y de los efectos y reacciones dentro de nuestra comunidad, tomando en cuenta el trauma historico de la asesora como el trauma complejo del “superviviente”.
Seeking Safety: Homelessness and Sexual Violence
The homeless population includes many people who are victims and/or survivors of sexual violence. This interactive session will provide an overview of homelessness and housing systems, risk factors for victimization, and housing protections under VAWA. Tips for response and collaboration with other organizations will be included.

Sexual Assault Demonstration Initiative: Findings & Recommendations for the Field (Panel)
Through the SADI, six dual/multi-service agencies engaged in a four-year process of assessment, planning, and implementation of new and enhanced services and organizational capacity building. During this discussion, panel members will share the lessons learned and provide recommendations for funders, technical assistance providers, and dual/multi-service programs.

Sexual Violence and LGBT Communities: Advocacy in the Juvenile Justice and Adult Criminal Justice Systems
Participants will discuss Lambda Legal cases and advocacy on behalf of system-involved young LGBT people and adults who are engaged with the criminal justice system. Participants will learn about the impact of trauma within these systems, review legal and policy protections, and discuss system reform efforts to make positive change.

Shut Up and Listen: Improving Sexual Assault Investigations with the Science of Trauma
Cases involving sexual violence must be viewed through a trauma-focused lens. This workshop will help law enforcement and other professionals utilize the neurobiology of trauma to enhance their investigations. Presenters will discuss best practices and techniques that have not only led to offender accountability, but also reduced victim attrition.
Sirviendo a Sobrevivientes de la Comunidad LGBTQI
Este es un taller introductorio sobre los sobrevivientes de agresión sexual en la comunidad LGBTQI. Se introduce al espectador las diferentes identidades dentro de la comunidad LGBTQ y proporciona el lenguaje necesario y dicción a dirigirse a los clientes transgénero en español. También, proporcionará estadísticas sobre la agresión sexual y la violencia de pareja en la comunidad LGBTQ, al igual que la forma de poner todo esto en práctica en nuestras agencias.

Sports Culture as an Opportunity to Prevent Sexual Violence
Raliance will discuss its framework developed in partnership with the Center for Gender Equity and Health at the University of California, San Diego that identifies how sport is both an avenue and platform for change and facilitate a discussion with two grantees working on their SV prevention strategies in the sport system.

Stable and Empowering Leadership Skills
Organizations best situated to enhance services are led by people who demonstrate trust and empowerment of their staff. We will discuss facilitators of leadership, direct and ethical communication, transparency, addressing conflict, creating both/and thinking, employing a problem-solving stance and bringing to the surface differences and encouraging the sharing of ideas.

State Legislatures Prioritizing Sexual Assault Response: Opportunities and Challenges
This workshop will discuss major sexual assault policy issues states are addressing. Participants will examine best practices for collaboration and coalition building with specific emphasis on the range of organizations and stakeholders focusing on sexual assault as well as the challenges of addressing sexual assault in the state legislative arena.
Staying Relevant While Staying the Course: How to Take Action for a Changing Community Context While Achieving Long Term Prevention Goals

As we act on inclusivity and equity in sexual assault prevention, how should preventionists communicate the long-term anti-oppression work they do, and ensure programming stays relevant, focused, feasible and comprehensive? We’ll walk through a 3-step process of program mapping and discuss how to be both comprehensive and contextually current.

Strong Foundations for Sustainable Services: Lessons in Organizational Change

Often, our policies do not adequately recognize the distinct needs of survivors of sexual violence or value long-term emotional safety and ongoing emotional support. In this workshop, participants will learn strategies for supporting strong sexual assault services through regular review and revision of policies, procedures, staff structures, and agency forms.

Substance Use and Sexual Violence

The links between sexual violence and substance abuse are undeniable, yet rarely discussed. Substances can be used to facilitate sexual violence; victims may have been under the influence at the time of the assault, or using substances as a coping strategy after the assault.

Super Women & Black Girl Magic: How Our Strength Can Hijack Our Healing

This seminar will discuss how “Super Woman” mentality can be destructive to not only survivors, but how a society informed by racial stereotypes, myths, and attitudes that Black girls are unworthy creates a perfect storm for Black girls and women to continue to be viewed as invaluable and “rapable”.

Supporting and Sustaining Staff
Dual/multi-service organizations cannot create trauma-informed spaces and give compassionate care to survivors without doing the same for their staff. This workshop will explore the need to address these issues as essential to enhancing sexual assault services, highlighting specific strategies programs can implement to valuing staff members and building staff resilience.

Survivors and Unsung Heroes: Advocating for Transgender People Behind Bars
During this interactive workshop, participants will learn about the experiences of incarcerated transgender people, their stories of survival and triumph, and strategies to support and advocate for them. Participants will also learn about the Prison Rape Elimination Act’s protections for transgender people—protections that they themselves helped to secure.

Teaching Good Sex: A Method for Violence Prevention
Promoting sexual health is a key factor in preventing sexual violence. We jump-start our prevention efforts when we move beyond talking about what is wrong and come together to create a shared vision of healthy pro-social communities. In this interactive workshop we will look at how we can create and enhance a community of healthy sexuality individually, in relationships, in our community, and in our society at large. Participants will be able to define healthy sexuality and learn at least three different ways they can incorporate this principle into their work to begin and continue changing cultures of violence for us and for future generations.

Teaching Youth-Serving Professionals to Deliver Trauma-Informed Healthy Sexuality Education: A Collaborative Project of NCCASA and SHIFT NC
This session will introduce participants to the collaborative project between NCCASA and SHIFT NC, provide an overview of the curricula core components and curricula activities, and highlight the benefits of a collaborative partnership between statewide agencies that share programmatic risk and protective factors in addressing trauma.
The History of Sexual Violence: Rape on the College Campus from 1947-1969
This workshop explores the legacy of sexual violence on college campuses in the mid-twentieth century. Exploring attitudes about sexual violence across different generations provides important clues about how sociocultural factors shape contemporary rape myths. Participants will learn how their respective organizations can benefit from applying historical approaches to their work.

Lecture

The Neurobiology of Bravery: How Teaching People to Manage Their Stress Response can Create More Effective Bystanders
An often overlooked factor that impacts bystander intervention is the physiological stress response. Feminist empowerment self-defense gives people tools to manage their stress response so they can think and communicate clearly when they feel fear. This interactive workshop will give people strategies to use these techniques in bystander education.

Lecture & Experiential

Self Defense Empowerment

The Right to Say YES or NO: Exploring the Nexus of Consent and Competency in the Lives of Many People with Disabilities
For individuals with disabilities, engaging in intimate relationships is taboo due to concerns about whether the person can understand and give consent. This workshop will review state laws, explore the balance of safety & dignity, and discuss implications for policy through providing a forum to share and hear from the field.

Interactive

The VOICE (Victim services Occupation, Information, and Compensation Experiences) Survey Implications for Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence Advocate Wellness
The purpose of VOICE survey is to provide an overview of Texas IPV and sexual assault agency staff. The survey gathered information about the workforce experiences, compensation, and occupational stress. Survey information will help to identify areas for organizational improvement to increase occupational wellness, including strategies to reduce turnover.

Lecture
They SLAY! A Sexual Assault Prevention Program for Girls’ Sports Teams
This workshop will introduce a new prevention program for high school girls’ sports teams. “Student Leaders & Athletic Youth” (SLAY) is culturally competent and research-based. The presenter will share curriculum content, evaluation results, and highlight an RPE-funded project as a case example, at a diverse inner-city high school in Seattle.

ThisGEN: Youth Summit - Organizing to End SV
Participants will hear about ThisGEN: Youth Summit outcomes and explore ways to support calls to action from the Summit participants that specify how they want to use media, sports, policy advocacy, and community organizing to end sexual violence.

Together We Stand: Transgender Inclusion
What does a trans-inclusive agency look like? Hear from panelists who will share their path and steadfast dedication to success. Participants will leave with a deeper sense of what social justice means (and who it includes!), as well as concrete ideas on how to increase their agency’s inclusiveness to transgender survivors and communities.

Transforming Discussions Around Safety: Moving Beyond Harmful Safety Steps
Fear-based discussions of violence can be used to perpetuate biases, stereotypes, and social control. This workshop will examine transformative ways to prevent violence and live safely while promoting social change. It will also explore the role empowerment-based self-defense can play in shifting the dialogue in prevention, recovery, and education.

Transforming Trauma: A Holistic, Trauma-Informed Program at the California Institution for Women
This workshop will examine strategies being used to transform a California prison where sexual abuse of women prisoners by staff and other inmates is commonplace. Speakers will highlight efforts including wellness and trauma programming and leadership opportunities—including as prevention educators and peer crisis counselors—for the women living there.
Transnational Criminal Enterprise: Victims & Perpetrators of Gang Facilitated Human Trafficking
This workshop will examine aspects of international and gang facilitated human trafficking, while exploring the dynamics of the trafficker/victim relationship. We will discuss the vulnerabilities to violence and gang membership while exploring the interrelated systems of oppression. We will provide interactive learning scenarios where participants will use trafficking scenarios to develop trauma informed investigations and service provision plans.

U.S. Army’s Renewed Focus on Prevention
The Army has enhanced its efforts in primary prevention of sexual harassment and sexual assault. Learn how the Army has leveraged evidence-based prevention strategies and techniques, and fostered collaboration between the military services, academia and industry to create targeted initiatives to further educate on relevant prevention practices.

Unpacking the Prevention Toybox
The Indiana Coalition against Domestic Violence has developed a “toybox” of prevention activities to help us communicate abstract prevention concepts with diverse audiences. This session will provide an overview of the five activities included in the toybox, and participants will have the opportunity to play two of the games.

Victim Blaming + Black Women: How a Legacy of Dual Oppression Shapes Our Experience as Survivors
A facilitated conversation on the consequences of victim blaming black women survivors (cis and trans) through an exploration of stories that highlight weaknesses in social justice that contribute to the erasure of violence against black women. We will conclude by imagining practical ways to transform our communities/agencies/etc.

Violencia Domestical/Asalto Sexual: Retos en Comunidades Rurales Frontera El Paso/Cd. Juárez

Analizar e informar sobre los retos que los consejeros de violencia domestica y asalto sexual enfrentamos tanto en las comunidades rurales en Texas como en la frontera: investigacion por autoridades, victimas acudiendo a puentes internacionales, creencias y miedos de victimas en areas rurales, servicios por CASFV.

We ALL Need Support: Best Practices for Gender-Integrated Support Groups

This workshop will share the results of a 2016 FORGE national survey of sexual assault support group facilitators and accompanying in-depth interviews with agencies who offered insights into successfully conducting all-gender support groups. Content from the newly released FORGE guide will highlight best practices and useful tips for facilitators and agencies that provide group support.

We Cannot Walk Alone: Building Alliances with the Broader Anti-Oppression Struggle

The institutions we rely on in advocating for survivors—courts, law enforcement, CPS, schools—also represent sites of violence and oppression for many. This interactive discussion will explore the opportunities and risks of an increasingly intersectional anti-violence movement, one that forges alliances with those seeking to dismantle broader systemic injustice.

When Advocacy is Also Personal: How Advocates from Marginalized, Underserved, or Ignored Communities Deal with the Experience of People They Assist

Advocates and social justice workers know the potential toll the work has on their psychic, with possible burn-out, or compassion fatigue. Even more when the work one does is directly tied to their marginalized identity. This interactive workshop will discuss these dynamics and outline various strategies to maintain sanity and personal wellness, while staying engaged in the work.
Working in Cooperation with Consulates and Other Community Resources
People who are undocumented face a high risk of sexual violence and harassment as farm workers, and in detention facilities. Their status and background create added barriers for them to understand their rights, and access support services. This workshop will focus on the role rape crisis centers, advocates, and all those who work with undocumented folks have in creating culturally competent approaches, providing linguistically-accessible resources as well as trauma-informed advocacy and prevention services.

Youth Participatory Action Research (YPAR) with Chicana/Latina Girls
YPAR is an approach to research that is participatory and requires the involvement of youth in the research process, including, developing research questions that are pertinent to their lives. Participants will learn how YPAR aims changing and challenging systems of oppression and allows a space for healing in youth work.

Sexual abuse in detention

Track

Just Detention International is a health and human rights organization that seeks to end sexual abuse in all forms of detention. JDI is the only organization in the world dedicated exclusively to ending sexual abuse behind bars. JDI works to: hold government officials accountable for prisoner rape; promote public attitudes that value the dignity and safety of people in detention; and ensure that survivors of this violence get the help they need.

Female Perpetrators of Sexual Abuse in Detention: Unpacking the Issue; Vivian Jojola, Lara Stemple, Erica Gammill

This workshop will explore the incidence and dynamics of sexual abuse in detention perpetrated by women and attempt to unpack the discomfort surrounding the issue. It will feature accounts from prisoners who were abused by women, and will provide guidance for service providers on addressing this type of violence.

A Global Crisis: Efforts to Address Sexual Abuse in Detention in South Africa and Beyond; Linda McFarlane, Prince Nare, Cynthia Totten

This workshop will examine prisoner rape from an international perspective -- emphasizing efforts to increase safety in South Africa’s prisons, where sexual abuse is widespread but remains largely a hidden issue. Drawing upon survivor stories, speakers will address the need for increased access to services and care for incarcerated survivors globally.

Getting Started: Strategies for the Rural Victim Advocate on Working with Incarcerated Survivors; Leah Green, Cynthia Totten, Melanie Barton

This workshop will address the challenges facing rural victim advocates in providing services to incarcerated survivors, and will feature representatives from state coalitions whose rural member programs are providing a range of services behind bars. The workshop will also include an overview of the basics on sexual abuse behind bars.

Transforming Trauma: A Holistic, Trauma-Informed Program at the California Institution for Women; Vivian Jojola, Vanessa Sapien, Jessica Seipel

This workshop will examine strategies being used to transform a California prison where sexual abuse of women prisoners by staff and other inmates is commonplace. Speakers will highlight efforts including wellness and trauma programming and leadership opportunities -- including as prevention educators and peer crisis counselors -- for the women living there.
Empowerment Self-Defense Action (ESDA) contributes to the anti-violence movement by promoting Empowerment Self-Defense as a strategy to prevent, stop, and heal from interpersonal violence. ESDA uses a research-based model of empowerment self-defense that honors survivors, understands trauma, and is committed to social justice and social change to prevent violence.

Healing From Sexual Trauma: A Movement-Based, Empowerment Self-Defense Approach; Brenda Jones, Lynne Marie Wannamaker
Studies show empowerment self-defense (ESD) reduces sexual assault risk, increases confidence, and decreases anxiety and self-blame. Research also shows that body-oriented healing approaches like ESD can reduce post-traumatic symptoms in survivors. This experiential workshop provides an opportunity to observe, learn, and practice embodied skills, and about the evidence supporting ESD.

Transforming Discussions Around Safety: Moving Beyond Harmful Safety Steps; Alena Schaim
Fear-based discussions of violence can be used to perpetuate biases, stereotypes, and social control. This workshop will examine transformative ways to prevent violence and live safely while promoting social change. It will also explore the role empowerment-based self-defense can play in shifting the dialogue in prevention, recovery, and education.

The Neurobiology of Bravery: How Teaching People to Manage Their Stress Response Can Create More Effective Bystanders; Patti Giggans, Darlene DeFour, Meg Stone
An often overlooked factor that impacts bystander intervention is the physiological stress response. Feminist empowerment self-defense gives people tools to manage their stress response so they can think and communicate clearly when they feel fear. This interactive workshop will give people strategies to use these techniques in bystander education.

“I Tried to Stop Him”: Criminalizing People of Color for Protecting Ourselves (Panel); Helen Joseph (facilitator), Deana Lewis, Darlene DeFour, Victoria Law
The name Marissa Alexander may be familiar. She is the tip of an iceberg: Women and LGBTQ/GNC people of color are more likely to be criminally punished for protecting themselves against violence. This panel will discuss these realities, and what actions we all can take to end this injustice.
The Sexual Assault Demonstration Initiative (SADI) is the first large-scale project to address the challenges dual/multi-service programs face in reaching sexual assault survivors by dedicating resources, support, and replicable tools tailored specifically to the needs of those programs. This project is a collaboration between National Sexual Assault Coalition Resource Sharing Project, National Sexual Violence Resource Center, Minnesota Indian Women’s Sexual Assault Coalition, National Organization of API Ending Sexual Violence, and Office on Violence Against Women.

Actively Anti-Racist Sexual Assault Services; Kris Bein, Cat Fribley
If we are to end sexual violence in our communities we must courageously and honestly examine how racism affects our own organizations and creates barriers for survivors of color who are seeking services. Hear from peers engaging with underserved communities and shifting organizational culture to be responsive to marginalized communities.

Strong Foundations for Sustainable Services: Lessons in Organizational Change; Kris Bein, Valerie Davis
Often, our policies do not adequately recognize the distinct needs of survivors of sexual violence or value long-term emotional safety and ongoing emotional support. In this workshop, participants will learn strategies for supporting strong sexual assault services through regular review and revision of policies, procedures, staff structures, and agency forms.

Stable and Empowering Leadership Skills; Cat Fribley
Organizations best situated to enhance services are led by people who demonstrate trust and empowerment of their staff. We will discuss facilitators of leadership, direct and ethical communication, transparency, addressing conflict, creating both/and thinking, employing a problem-solving stance and bringing to the surface differences and encouraging the sharing of ideas.
Supporting and Sustaining Staff; Valeria Davis, Mira Yusef
Dual/multi-service organizations cannot create trauma-informed spaces and give compassionate care to survivors without doing the same for their staff. This workshop will explore the need to address these issues as essential to enhancing sexual assault services, highlighting specific strategies programs can implement to valuing staff members and building staff resilience.

Anti-Oppression + Sexual Violence Services in Culturally-specific programs; Nicole Matthews, Mira Yusef
This workshop will continue the conversation on anti-racist principles and how that plays into building trauma informed and sustainable programs for sexual assault services within culturally specific programs. Communities served by culturally specific programs are diverse and will look at what the strategies rooted in anti-oppression work looks like within those spaces.

Sexual Assault Demonstration Initiative: Findings & Recommendations for the Field (Panel); Cat Friibley (Facilitator), Valerie Davis, Nicole Matthews, Melissa Schmisek
Through the SADI, six dual/multi-service agencies engaged in a four-year process of assessment, planning, and implementation of new and enhanced services and organizational capacity building. During this discussion, panel members will share the lessons learned and provide recommendations for funders, technical assistance providers, and dual/multi-service programs.

LIFESPAN PROJECT TRACK

National Technical Assistance Project

Sexual Assault Across the Lifespan

Sexual assault and other forms of sexual violence can impact a person at any point across the lifespan. The NSVRC’s Lifespan Project is a technical assistance initiative to provide advocates, medical providers, law enforcement, prosecutors, and others with resources and strategies to effectively respond to and support survivors of sexual violence. The Lifespan Project focuses on trauma-informed service delivery with a particular concern for populations who may fall through the cracks of our systems.

Bicultural vs. Bilingual; Maria Jirau-Torres
This workshop will address the difference between speaking a language and communication that looks and feels relatable to diverse communities and populations. In this interactive workshop, the presenter will discuss the needs and strengths around creating culturally responsive resources, and the benefit of having a working understanding of the importance of communication in and with diverse cultures and communities.
Breaking the Barrier: Youth Access to Support and Services; Amparo Cruz, Camila Barrera, Patrick Donovan

This workshop will increase awareness and intervention by training youth workers to recognize abuse, respond appropriately, and refer youth to RCC. It empowers adolescent survivors by increasing youth-serving support and develops peer leadership and also create a youth friendly atmosphere in RCC.

Let’s Talk About Sex and Aging: Advocates Working with Older Adults’ Sexuality After Sexual Violence; Jane Fleishman

The sexual journey continues throughout the lifespan. Older adult survivors need advocates they can talk to about sexual health yet many advocates feel uncomfortable in this realm. Through humor and frank discussion, we will take apart the silences, particularly around older adults’ sexuality and those with marginalized identities; focus is on skill-building.

Overview of Indigenous Healing-Informed Response to Trauma; Ethleen Iron Cloud-Two Dogs

Addressing the impact of trauma from an Indigenous cultural healing-informed model will be discussed and examples from the Oglala Lakota culture will be shared. Participants will formulate ideas and suggestions on how to incorporate culture into healing responses to trauma.

Substance Use and Sexual Violence; Karla Vierthaler

The links between sexual violence and substance abuse are undeniable, yet rarely discussed. Substances can be used to facilitate sexual violence; victims may have been under the influence at the time of the assault, or using substances as a coping strategy after the assault.

When Advocacy is Also Personal: How Advocates from Marginalized, Underserved, or Ignored Communities Deal with the Experience of People They Assist (3 hours long); Tracy D. Wright

Advocates and social justice workers know the potential toll the work has on their psyche, with possible burn-out, or compassion fatigue - even more when the work one does is directly tied to their marginalized identity. This interactive workshop will discuss these dynamics and outline various strategies to maintain sanity and personal wellness, while staying engaged in the work.

Critical Conversation: Navigating the Gulf Between Those who Serve Victims of Sexual Violence and Those who Offend; Maia Christopher

In ending sexual violence there is a need for those who meet the needs of all involved in sexual violence to communicate. This communication is hampered by many different lived experiences, lack of education, and other reasons. This interactive/conversational workshop will discuss these dynamics and outline the strategies to work through some of these challenges.
FORGE is a national transgender anti-violence organization, founded in 1994. Since 2009, we have been federally funded to provide direct services to transgender, gender non-conforming and gender non-binary survivors of sexual assault. Since 2011, FORGE has served as the only transgender-focused organization federally funded to provide training and technical assistance to providers around the country who work with transgender survivors of sexual assault, domestic and dating violence, and stalking. Our role as a technical assistance provider has allowed us to directly see key continued and emerging challenges many agencies are experiencing in serving sexual assault survivors of all genders.

Outside the Boxes: Working with Gender Non-Binary Survivors; michael munson
When survivors live and identify outside of culturally defined male and female gender boxes, it’s vital for providers working within sex-segregated and gender-integrated environments to be adaptive, creative, and knowledgeable about non-binary clients. You’ll leave this interactive workshop with non-binary specific data, case examples, and practical tips on better serving non-binary survivors.

Anti-Transgender Bathroom Bills: When Legislation Provokes Fear Not Safety; michael munson
Sexual assault agencies want to support transgender communities AND counter myths about sexual assault linkages to transgender rights. How can organizations effectively respond to false charges that trans people’s human rights threaten women’s/children’s safety? What are the negative impacts of anti-trans legislation and repeated accusations of being sexual predators on trans survivors?

Together We Stand: Transgender Inclusion (Panel); michael munson (facilitator), Arin Fisher, Kelly Moe Litke, Kim Day, Rachel Haas
What does a trans-inclusive agency look like? Hear from panelists who will share their path and steadfast dedication to success. Participants will leave with a deeper sense of what social justice means (and who it includes!), as well as concrete ideas on how to increase their agency’s inclusiveness to transgender survivors and communities.
Survivors and Unsung Heroes: Advocating for Transgender People Behind Bars; Linda McFarlane, Morgan Givens
During this interactive workshop, participants will learn about the experiences of incarcerated transgender people, their stories of survival and triumph, and strategies to support and advocate for them. Participants will also learn about the Prison Rape Elimination Act’s protections for transgender people -- protections that they themselves helped to secure.

RALLYANCE TRACK

Raliance is a collaborative initiative dedicated to ending sexual violence in one generation. Composed of three top sexual violence prevention organizations – the National Sexual Violence Resource Center (NSVRC), the California Coalition Against Sexual Assault (CALCASA)-PreventConnect and the National Alliance to End Sexual Violence (NAESV) – Raliance serves as the central hub for effective allocation and distribution of programmatic funding in sexual violence prevention and as the go-to resource for policymakers, advocates, service providers and the media. Raliance is funded through a $10 million multiyear commitment from the National Football League. The name was inspired by the entity’s intent to rally engagement from stakeholders and align goals and resources behind its overarching mission of putting a stop to sexual violence once and for all. Learn more at Raliance.org.

Sports Culture as an Opportunity to Prevent Sexual Violence; Lindsay McDaniel Mapp, Ed Heisler, Rebecca Milliman
Raliance will discuss its framework developed in partnership with the Center for Gender Equity and Health at the University of California, San Diego that identifies how sport is both an avenue and platform for change and facilitate a discussion with two grantees working on their SV prevention strategies in the sport system.

Reducing the Likelihood Youth Will Sexually Offend as a Key Strategy to Prevent Sexual Violence; Dr. Ryan Shields
Help Wanted, a project by the Moore Center for the Prevention of Child Sexual Abuse at Bloomberg School of Public Health, Johns Hopkins University, is exploring ways to support earlier intervention into the lives of young people to empower and realize lives free from causing sexual harm.
We ALL Need Support: Best Practices for Gender-Integrated Support Groups; michael munson, Loree Cook-Daniels
This workshop will share the results of a 2016 FORGE national survey of sexual assault support group facilitators and accompanying in-depth interviews with agencies who offered insights into successfully conducting all-gender support groups. Content from the newly released FORGE guide will highlight best practices and useful tips for facilitators and agencies that provide group support.

Envisioning a Culture of Respect: Engaging Youth as Change-Makers; Emily Austin, Levette Johnson, Cheyenne Jacobs
Raliance will discuss its strategy to engage youth as change-makers at the March 2017 ThisGEN Youth Summit and feature a discussion with Mississippi Coalition Against Sexual Assault convener of a Youth Advocate Council and Youth Advocate Institute South to engage African American youth to lead sexual violence prevention strategy.

NSVRC PREVENTION TRACK

The National Sexual Violence Resource Center (NSVRC) is the leading nonprofit in providing information and tools to prevent and respond to sexual violence. NSVRC translates research and trends into best practices that help individuals, communities and service providers achieve real and lasting change. The center also works with the media to promote informed reporting. Every April, NSVRC leads Sexual Assault Awareness Month (SAAM), a campaign to educate and engage the public in addressing this widespread issue. NSVRC is also one of the three founding organizations of Raliance, a national, collaborative initiative dedicated to ending sexual violence in one generation. The organization was chartered in 2000 by the Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape.

A Recipe for Implementing Community-Engaged Prevention Programming in Rural, Conservative Environments
In this skill-building workshop, preventionists who have taken critical action in a rural community will share their recipe book for success. Primary prevention in rural communities requires engaging in tough conversations, utilizing creative approaches, and investing in preventionist resiliency. Participants will engage in activity-based learning and leave with practical tools.
Assessing Organizational Readiness for Sexual Violence Prevention – A Collaborative Process Between Departments of Health, Local Contractors, and Research Institutions
In 2016, the NM Department of Health, University of NM, and local prevention partners began a structured, collaborative process to assess readiness in six communities to prevent sexual violence through organizational policies and practices. Partners describe the successes and challenges of the assessment process and how findings are being used to guide ongoing work.

Barbershop Safety Network: Buzz for Safety - Engaging Barbers in Preventing Sexual Violence
The “Barbershop Safety Network: Buzz for Safety,” project uses a community organizing approach to identify, develop, and engage through an existing network of men in the community: barbers. We set up a series of three workshops at local barber shops to engage the community in discussions around healthy masculinity, social justice, fatherhood, healthy relationships, race, and issues that relate to them. We incorporated an evaluation component through a partnership with the University of Massachusetts, Lowell to collect data on the impact of the workshops.

Community-Based Prevention From a Cultural Perspective
This workshop will be about the experience of building a culturally relevant prevention message in a predominantly Native community. What my challenges were, how the tribe’s violence prevention advocates helped me overcome those challenges and build bridges to expand prevention efforts, and form a blueprint to reach other diverse communities.

Engaging Trans Women In Sexual Violence Prevention Work
Trans women’s voices have historically been marginalized, even in the mostly-female field of sexual violence prevention. Join us to learn the skills needed to engage transgender women as agents of community change, develop programming responsive to trans women’s needs, and strengthen existing programming through the incorporation of transfeminist principles.

Experiences Developing Community-Based Violence Prevention Programs for Youth of Color
We will focus on the importance of teaching youth community history to understand violence, and the responses to violence, in their communities. We will be discussing how interpersonal violence is tied to systemic violence (specifically colonization, racism, and xenophobia) and why anti-oppression frameworks are vital for youth-serving violence prevention programs.
Messaging About Alcohol and Sex: Having the Courageous Conversation and Moving to Critical Action
There is a significant relationship between alcohol and sexual assault on campuses, but we are often unsure how to address the topic without victim-blaming. This session will address the relationship between alcohol, sex, and sexual assault, evaluate related messaging/outreach efforts, consider relevant environmental strategies, and develop tools to take home.

Organizing An End to Violence: A Systems Approach to Prevention
This workshop will explore how the principals of community organizing and systems analysis can be applied to violence prevention on a college campus. Participants will practice using the tools of power mapping and strategic relationship building to reduce campus sexual and relationship violence.

Parents for Prevention: Raising a Sexually Healthy Generation
Parents want to raise children who are safe from sexual violence, who would never commit sexual harm, and who would speak out if they see violence being perpetrated. Parents for Prevention is an online space for parents to find the resources they need to prevent violence before it starts.

Carolyn Bryant, the white woman who accused Emmett Till, a 14-year old African-American boy, of making advances at her in Mississippi in 1955, which led to Till’s lynching, recently recanted her claims. Till’s murder, and Bryant’s complicity in it, exemplifies the way gender and race have intersected with terrible consequences where sexual violence is concerned for black men and women. Black men historically suffered false rape accusations, while sexual violence against black women was ignored and went unpunished. In this talk, I will use the story of Till and Bryant to illustrate what an intersectional approach to supporting women of color survivors of sexual assault—one that goes beyond white empathy to real solidarity—might look like.

Professor Hooker served as co-Chair of the American Political Science Association’s Presidential Task Force on Racial and Social Class Inequalities in the Americas (2014-2015) and as Associate Director of the Teresa Lozano Long Institute of Latin American Studies (LLILAS) at UT-Austin from 2009 to 2014. She has been the recipient of a number of prestigious awards, most recently from the National Endowment for the Humanities, and has been a Visiting Fellow at the CUNY Graduate Center and the Du Bois Institute for African American Research at Harvard University.
Amita Swadhin
Strategies for Movement Building

In this keynote, Mirror Memoirs Founder and survivor-activist Amita Swadhin, will outline a vision of movement building that is intersectional, intergenerational, and aligned with a commitment to end not only sexual violence but also all forms of institutional and interpersonal oppression.

Biography

Amita Swadhin is an educator, storyteller, activist and consultant dedicated to fighting interpersonal and institutional violence against young people. Her commitments and approach to this work stem from her experiences as a genderqueer, femme queer woman of color, daughter of immigrants, and years of abuse by her parents, including eight years of rape by her father.

She is a frequent speaker at colleges, conferences, and community organizations nationwide, and a consultant with over fifteen years of experience in nonprofits serving low-income, immigrant and LGBTQ communities of color. She also supports individual survivors as a coach focused on healing and social entrepreneurship via her online course Power, Pleasure, Purpose. Amita has been publicly out as a survivor of child sexual abuse since she interned at the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Violence Against Women in 1997.

In 2016, Amita received a two-year Just Beginnings Collaborative Fellowship, allowing her to launch Mirror Memoirs, an oral history project centering the stories, healing and leadership of LGBTQ people of color who survived child sexual abuse in social justice movements nationwide.

From March 2012 to September 2015, Amita was the Los Angeles Executive Director of Peer Health Exchange, empowering teens to make healthy decisions. In the fall of 2015, they were the Interim Executive Director of API Equality-LA, building power in the Asian and Pacific Islander community to achieve LGBTQ equality and racial and social justice.

Prior to relocating to Los Angeles, Amita was the coordinator and a cast member of Secret Survivors, a theater project featuring child sexual abuse survivors telling their stories, which she conceived for Ping Chong & Co., an award-winning performance company in New York City.

Amita has held positions at Legal Momentum, Global Kids, Make the Road NY, Sadie Nash Leadership Project and Kingsborough Community College (CUNY), and served as the final Board Chair of the National Youth Advocacy Coalition, a national organization advocating for and with LGBTQ youth.
JESSICA LUTHER
Unsportsmanlike Conduct: At the Intersection of Sports and Sexual Violence

Jessica Luther will discuss the unique issues that arise when sexual violence intersects with sports, such as the celebrity of players, the influence of money, the response of fandom, and role of masculinity. Luther will also talk about the sports media’s role in shaping the conversation around sexual violence and how it can be better.

BIOGRAPHY
Jessica Luther is an independent journalist and writer whose work has appeared in ESPN the Magazine, New York Times Magazine, Texas Observer, and at Sports Illustrated, The New York Times, Vice Sports, and BuzzFeed.

Her work gained national attention in August 2015 when writing for Texas Monthly, Dan Solomon and she broke open the story about a Baylor football player on trial for sexual assault, a case known by only a few in the community and not reported in the media for nearly two years. Her first book, Unsportsmanlike Conduct: College Football and the Politics of Rape, was published in September 2016 by Akashic Books.

Her next book, co-authored with Kavitha Davidson and tentatively titled How To Love Sports When They Don’t Love You Back, is due out in 2018 from University of Texas Press.
Tackling Institutionalized Indifference: Lessons for SART Leaders from Recent Investigations

What can Department of Justice investigations on gender bias in sexual assault investigation and prosecution teach the rest of us? Specifically, how do we recognize gender bias and what is the difference between individual bias and institutionalized indifference? Explore insights and implications of DOJ findings for prosecutors, advocates, and collaborative teams.

BIOGRAPHY

Julie Germann, J.D., is a professional speaker, trainer and consultant specializing in sexual assault, domestic violence, and child abuse. Julie draws on her past experience to help develop victim-centered protocols for the investigation and prosecution of sexual and physical violence. Julie is admitted to the practice of law in the state of Minnesota. She is a 2002 graduate of Hamline University School of Law. She also has a Bachelor of Science in psychology from the University of LaCrosse, Wisconsin.

Prior to founding Finding the Right, Julie worked for more than a decade as a prosecutor in Rochester, Minnesota. Julie’s prosecution career focused on child abuse, sexual assault, and domestic violence. Her successful trial record has earned her strong rapport among law enforcement professionals and victim advocacy groups. Julie’s extensive interactions with victimized women and children enhanced her understanding of the escalation of violence, and allowed her to judiciously prosecute such cases, from misdemeanor domestic situations to homicides.

Throughout her career, Julie has worked with diverse teams of professionals from many disciplines including law enforcement, child protection, probation, victim advocacy, and medical staff. She was privileged to collaborate with a dedicated team of professionals who created and opened the Mayo Clinic Child Advocacy Center in Rochester, Minnesota, in order to utilize a multidisciplinary approach to the investigation of child sexual and physical abuse.

Julie has provided specialized training to prosecutors, police officers, victim advocates, and sexual assault nurse examiners on the best practices in the investigation of sexual assaults. Her advanced training in the forensic interviewing of children enables her to teach those investigation and forensic interviewing techniques. She was an adjunct professor in the Child Advocacy Studies (CAST) program at Winona State University.
Rebecca Flores
Organizing Farm Workers in Texas

My experience in organizing farm workers in south Texas took a unique form different from methods used to organize other workers. Cesar Chavez and Fred Ross taught us the basics to building a foundation for an organization that would last over time, and that building block created a culture of activism that was passed on to the children of these workers.

Biography
Throughout her long and dedicated career, Rebecca has worked to improve conditions for farm workers. Beginning in 1975, at offices in San Juan, Texas, Rebecca established a large membership among the Rio Grande Valley farm workers as Texas Director of the United Farm Workers Union. With these organized farm workers, Rebecca and her committed staff provided social services where there were none. She advocated for changes in state services that had not considered the special needs of farm workers, their migrancy, their poverty, or their language.

Over the years, Rebecca led efforts to pass legislation for worker’s compensation for injured farm workers, unemployment compensation for farm workers, increased the Texas minimum wage, provided for toilets and potable drinking water in the fields, and passed protective Pesticide Right to Know legislation. She led annual campaigns in the Texas onion fields to raise piece rates. She organized mushroom pickers in Florida, strawberry and grape pickers in California that resulted in a union contract. She helped win the first union contract in the State of Washington at Chateau Ste. Michelle. She helped establish a chain of day care centers in the colonias that provided care and good nutrition for farm worker children. In 2001, she helped organize and sign the first union contracts in U.S. history for lay employees at the Diocese of Brownsville. For three years, she was Texas Director of the National AFL CIO. In December 2005, Rebecca retired from her union job.

Since 2014, Rebecca began to listen to the issue of the refugee mothers and children being detained in private prisons Karnes City and Dilley, Texas, because the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) determined they create a national security risk. Rebecca, and others from the Interfaith Welcome Coalition, visit the detention center weekly, and their goal is to change the DHS policy of detaining these mothers and children for months on end.
Nicole Pittman founded the Center on Youth Registration Reform at Impact Justice, an organization dedicated to eliminating the practice of placing kids on sex-offense registries in the United States. A Stoneleigh and Rosenberg Leading Edge Fund fellow (and 2011 Senior Soros Justice Advocacy fellow), Pittman regularly testifies in front of state and federal legislatures, while building a bi-partisan coalition of advocates and lawmakers dedicated to tackling this issue, which many are calling a top priority in juvenile justice reform. Pittman, a graduate of Tulane School of Law and Duke University, began documenting the harms of labeling young people more than a decade ago as a juvenile public defender. She later collected more than 500 stories for the Human Rights Watch report, Raised on the Registry: The Irreparable Harm of Placing Children on Sex Offender Registries in the US. Pittman’s work is grounded in the belief that ending youth registration is an integral piece of the larger movement to reach beyond punitive responses and toward lasting child sexual abuse prevention and healing. Pittman and the CYRR’s work have been featured in a number of national media outlets including The New Yorker, New York Times, The Huffington Post, NPR, and CNN.
WENDY DAVIS
Harnessing Your Voice to Make a Difference

I’ll walk through the landscape of work ahead in the sexual assault world and why our collective voices can successfully make the advances we need.

BIOGRAPHY

Wendy Davis is the founder of Deeds Not Words, an advocacy initiative that empowers millennial women to channel their passion and energy on issues of gender equality into actionable change. She was previously a Texas state senator and candidate for governor of Texas, who fought tirelessly for reproductive rights, equal pay for women, justice for sexual assault survivors, affordable quality education and equality for the LGBTQ community.

Wendy’s public service career spans 3 decades, serving as a Fort Worth city councilperson for 9 years prior to her election to the Texas State Senate. From very humble beginnings, Wendy worked as a single parent to forge a path to college, beginning at community college, earning a scholarship to Texas Christian University where she graduated first in her class, and ultimately graduating with honors from Harvard Law School.

Widely recognized as a leader on women’s equality, Wendy is best known for her historic 13-hour filibuster on the floor of the Texas Senate to kill a legislative effort aimed at dramatically reducing women’s access to abortion care in her state. Her efforts were vindicated with the Supreme Court’s recent ruling in Whole Women’s Health v. Hellerstedt which overturned Texas’ anti-abortion law.

Though she was unsuccessful in her bid to become Texas’ first Democratic governor in 20 years, Wendy shattered records in both fundraising and volunteer recruitment. With over $43 million raised in her gubernatorial race, Wendy is most proud of the fact that the average donation to her race was only $103, with over 183,000 unique contributors from all over the country supporting her election. Wendy also energized a record number of over 34,000 active volunteers, and built a social media following of over 550,000 Facebook followers and over 180,000 Twitter followers, who continue to follow her work today.

Noted for her talents as a legislative leader, in 2009 Wendy was named the Texas Legislature’s Rookie of the Year by Texas Monthly magazine and Freshman of the Year by AARP, was named to Texas Monthly’s Top Ten Best Legislators in 2013 and has received numerous awards, including the 2013 Women Who Dared award by the National Council of Jewish Women, the 2013 Champion for Social Change award by the Texas Association Against Sexual Assault and the 2011 Legislative Star by the Texas Classroom Teachers Association.

Despite her well known work fighting for the opportunity for all Texans to realize their potential through education, employment and healthcare, Wendy is most proud of her role as mother to her daughters Amber (33) and Dru (27) and “Bubbie” to her new granddaughter, Ellis. Wendy resides and offices in Austin, Texas.

Global Promotional Sales
Global Promotional Sales is a women and minority owed small business. We have a large selection of promotional and educational products for the SAPR U.S. Air Force, SHARP U.S Army, Sexual Assault, and Domestic Violence Programs. We've been partnering with military and outreach programs for over Six years to help with your educational and promotional needs. www.globalpromotionsales.com

Hermanas and Crafts
We're two sisters who enjoy painting and crafting projects. As children, our mother, aunts, and grandma taught us to knit, embroider and craft with our hands. Before we let these traditions be forgotten, we took them on again to help us pass the time, but more than that, as a form of expression and therapy. We hope our pieces find good homes and inspire others. Our pieces include: paintings, prints, embroidered work, and woodwork.

iCarol
iCarol is an all-in-one solution for agencies addressing topics such as sexual assault, intimate partner violence, suicide prevention, and other issues. Use iCarol to get funding, improve service delivery and client outcomes, and respond via new communication channels. Features include contact documentation, data collection, safety follow-up, shift scheduling, volunteer and staff management, chat and texting, referral database, stats and reporting, and more. Used by over 50,000 users worldwide.

Las Ofrendas
Las Ofrendas offers handmade pieces by tk tunchez. Each piece is lovingly prepared to honor and celebrate the divine feminine energy in each of us. From flower crowns to jewelry to visual art each piece is created to bring joy to the wearer. tk has been studying stone healing for over 5 years and believes in the power of storytelling to heal and transform. She strives to bring this knowledge and passion into all her work.
Legal Aid for Survivors of Sexual Assault Network

The Texas Access to Justice Foundation administers funding for the Legal Aid for Survivors of Sexual Assault (LASSA) network which serves every Texas county, providing survivors of sexual assault with a wide range of free legal services from general advice to holistic, direct representation in civil legal matters stemming from the sexual assault.

National Alliance to End Sexual Violence

The National Alliance to End Sexual Violence is the voice in Washington for state coalitions and local programs working to end sexual violence and support survivors.

National Resource Center on Domestic Violence

For more than 20 years, the National Resource Center on Domestic Violence (NRCDV) has worked to improve community responses to domestic violence and, ultimately, prevent its occurrence. Our comprehensive technical assistance, training, and resource development are a few examples of the many ways in which NRCDV broadly serves those dedicated to ending domestic violence in relationships and communities.

National Sexual Violence Resource Center

The NSVRC identifies sexual violence as a public health, social justice, and human rights issue and collaborates with experts in the field using a variety of strategies to create a culture free of sexual violence. The NSVRC works to address the causes and impact of sexual violence through collaboration, prevention, and sharing research based resources. Stop by the booth for technical assistance and free resources.

Office of Justice Programs
