

5 Critical Questions:

Starting the conversation with our organizations about meeting the needs of male survivors

1. What is one way in which you can relate to male survivors of sexual violence?
2. What is something you would like to explore more in the way in which male survivors experience the responses of others to their victimization?
3. What services would you like to expand to work with male survivors?
4. What partnerships would assist you in providing services to male survivors?
5. What is the affect messaging your agency puts out into the community for male survivors?