Why Focus on Abuse in Later Life

10,000 Americans turn 65 every day.

Older women comprise more than half (55.8%) of the adult population age 65 and older.

United States Census Bureau (2012).
Racial and ethnic minority populations have increased from 5.7 million in 2000 (16.3% of the elderly population) to 8.5 million in 2011 (21% of the elderly). They are projected to increase to 20.2 million in 2030 (28% of the elderly).

1 in 10 community-residing older adults reported experiencing elder abuse in the past year.

Acierno et al. (2010).
About 2/3 of elder abuse victims are women.

Lifespan of Greater Rochester, Inc., Weill Cornell Medical Center of Cornell University, & New York City Department for the Aging. (2011).

Elders who experienced abuse, even modest abuse, had a 300% higher risk of death when compared to those who had not been abused.

Sexual Abuse in Later Life
Sexual Violence towards older adults can involve a range of offenses including “hand-on” behaviors such as rape and molestation, “hands-off” behaviors such as voyeurism, exhibitionism, sexual threats, or unwanted comments, and “harmful genital practices.”

Ramsey-Klawinski & Brandl, 2009

Until recently, it has historically and widely been beyond comprehension and belief that elders are victims of sexual assault.

Burgess & Clements, 2006
Elder sexual abuse is often embedded in a pattern of multifaceted elder abuse, whether it occurs in domestic or institutional settings.

Ramsey-Klawsnik, 2009

Statistics around sexual violence later in life are thought to be serious underestimates, and reliable data is not yet available.

Roberto & Teaster, 2005
Most perpetrators of sexual abuse against people in later life have special access to victims, as family members, intimate partners, fellow residents, or care providers.

NSVRC, 2010

Most identified older victims are female; however male victims have been reported in almost every study.

Burgess, Ramsey-Klawsnik, & Gregorian, 2008; Ramsey-Klawsnik, Teater, Hendricks, Marcum, & Abner, 2008
In the community, older victims of sexual abuse were violated most often by spouses/partners. Acierno, et al., (2010).

In facilities, employees responsible for care (43%) or other residents (41%) were most likely offenders. Ramsey-Klawsnik, H., Teaster, P. B., Mendiondo, M. S., Marcum, J. L., & Abner, E. L. (2008).

Many of those who experience sexual abuse in later life have health problems and disabilities, including cognitive and physical disabilities. Elkert & Sugar, 2008.
Due to age-related physiological changes, older victims tend to sustain more serious physical and psychosocial injuries during an assault than younger victims.

NSVRC, 2010

Genital injuries occur with more frequency and severity in post-menopausal women than younger rape victims.

Poulos & Sheridan, 2008

Older victims are more likely to be admitted to a hospital following assault.

Elkert & Sugar, 2008
Sexual offenders who are older adults are typically not held accountable. National Institute for Justice Research demonstrated that the older a victim, the less likely the offender was found guilty.

Schofield, 2006
